

Kim Soojin

Soojin Kim earned her Ph.D. in the Department of Archaeology and Art History from Seoul National University. She has taught at various institutions, including Seoul National University, Chungnam National University, University of Seoul, and Duksung Women's University. Additionally, she has worked as a visiting fellow and associate researcher at the Harvard-Yenching Institute and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. After completing her postdoctoral research at the Academy of Korean Studies, she currently serves as a research professor at Sungkyunkwan University. She teaches students about the art and culture of East Asia and has delivered invited lectures at institutions such as Academia Sinica in Taiwan, University of Pécs in Hungary, and Leipzig University in Germany. Her research interests encompass gender and art, Overseas Korean heritage, rituals and art, as well as the format and function of art mounting.

